

Important lesson for Ex Chief Justice

Tuesday, August 19, 2008 12:54 PM

Dear Editor,

Self-respect is a question of recognizing that anything worth having has a price. Ex Chief Justice Iftikhar Chaudhry should learn lesson from the resignation of Pervaiz Musharraf. For the sake of country and country's political stability he should withdraw his name from the restoring of Judges Movement.

From the last few years Pakistan is going through serious threats of terrorism, Talibanization and economical recessions. Few times we also had been getting serious war threats from our neighbors. But priority of our some political parties and our civil society activists is focusing on secondary issues.

Look at the ex army General Pervaiz Musharraf, how many times he withdraws himself for the sake of country. On his promises, he took retirement from his Army key position, he removed his uniform and holds fairest election ever held in the history of Pakistan. Now again for the sake of country and the stability of political system he resigned from the President office.

Generally we expect these kinds of behavior from democratic and civil society leaders but fortunately we have also people in our Army who believes in democracy. Ex Chief Justice Chaudhry Iftikhar should remember current Judges are like him, they are Pakistani too. They went to the same school of thoughts where he went and they became Judges through PCO as same like him.

Ex Chief Justice Iftikhar Chaudhry should remember he became Judge after taking the oath under PCO. Personal ego and agenda should not be a part of Judges Movement. He also needs to understand involvement of political parties and their desires behind this movement.

For the sake of country and its political stability, I humbly request Mr. Chaudhry Iftikhar to withdraw from his demand to restore himself as a Chief Justice of Pakistan.

Regards,
Dawar Naqvi
3604 Del Amo Blvd
Torrance, CA 90503
naqvidawar@gmail.com
310-729-0107